

SORROWING THROUGH LINED TRACKS AS THE FUNERAL TRAIN PASSED

President M'Kinley's Remains Reached Canton at Noon.

The School Children at Alliance Buried The Track In Flowers.

Body Lies In State at the Canton Court House This Afternoon

Thursday Afternoon All That Is Mortal of William McKinley, President, Will Be Taken To West Lawn Cemetery-- It Is Feared That Mrs. McKinley Will Collapse-- The Journey From Washington.

Canton, O., Sept. 18.—The funeral train bringing the remains of President McKinley to his home arrived here at 11:56 this noon.

The train entered Ohio at 9:10 a. m. and passed through ever increasing crowds of mourners till the home city, Canton, was reached.

At Alliance, the school children had buried the tracks in flowers, and had strewn the platform of the station with flowers.

Canton, Sept. 18.—Thousands witnessed the removal of the body from the funeral train. All were deeply touched. "He left us amidst cheers" said one old friend, "He returns amidst tears," surrounded by military, dignitaries of state, army, navy and all Canton friends. The body of McKinley was borne to the court house where it now reposes in state.

NATURE

Wears Her Most Beautiful Garb the Day the Dead President Reaches the Old Home.

Canton, O., Sept. 18.—Nature wears her most beautiful garb on the day the body of the martyred President reaches the town and home he loved so dearly. The sun is shining brightly and there is no gloom save in men's hearts. The townsmen, neighbors and friends of the dead President seem to have realized only now the terrible tragedy. Shocked by the crime, and by the death of the President they are now in the deepest grief, realizing that in a few hours the face of the great character will be forever hidden from human view. Not until last night did they seize vigorously the work of decorating the city in mourning and where walls were bare now crepe, bordered banners hang, while the black badge of death covers nearly every spot. No sign of death is yet on the McKinley home. Just below the historic house, neighbors have hung over Market street, a black bordered flag. An arch is being built a few feet north of the late President's home and at North and Market streets, where stood an arch under which thousands of cheering partisans passed in campaign times is being built another arch, to be covered with crepe, under which will tread the mourning citizens. An arch has been built at the court house and at the high school and every telegraph pole on the route which the funeral parsons will pass has been covered with crepe. The house that will bear the body was taken at 10 a. m. to the Pennsylvania station, where state troops were drawn up to receive the remains.

The body was taken to the Court House, where it will remain until evening, when it will be taken home to remain until it is conveyed to the Westlawn vault.

AT PITTSBURG

This Morning the Funeral Train Was Met by Gov. Nash—Favorite Hymns Were Sung.

Pittsburg, Sept. 18.—On Board Funeral Train.—As fast as steam can carry it the body of the late President McKinley is being carried back to his old home and its glory. The train which left Washington at 8 p. m., arrived here today at 9:15 a. m. It was divided into three sections to accelerate its speed, the second bearing the body, running six minutes behind the first. Asked if this was not too close for safety, Supt. Colin Studds, in charge of the train said: "No man will make a mistake on this run."

Great throngs met the trains at every stopping place. There were as many people at Baltimore and Harrisburg as when the body was brought in. At Altoona and Johnstown, at Brad- dock, and all other towns passed during the night, people packed the depot and lined the track. At Greensburg, Pa., where there is an orphan asylum, nearly 300 little ones were massed on a hillside singing, "Lead Kindly Light." At Pittsburg, which was reached at 9:15 a. m. there was an immense throng at the depot, anxious to get a glimpse of the casket. Governor Nash joined the funeral train here.

Mrs. McKinley is struggling to bear up, and Dr. Rixey says she will succeed, but those who see the slender, trembling figure and look into those fair haunted eyes, know that there will be a collapse and that it is not far away. Persistent rumors are afloat that her mind is wandering, that at times she does not seem to recall that the President is dead and asks when "The Major will return."

All these Secretary Cortelyou and Dr. Rixey deny. Besides the cabinet and high government officials, General Miles and Admiral Dewey and their staffs are on the second section.

In simple state, yet with more than royal honors, Wm. McKinley, dead, was borne through the city this morning to the Canton tomb. Pittsburg paid her tribute in silence save for the booming of heavy guns and the tolling of the bells. The tracks of the Pennsylvania railroad for miles within the city limits of Pittsburg, and Allegheny were lined with sorrowing people. The scene was impressive for its silence and simplicity. The train did not stop in this city and continued its journey without interruption. The speed through the twin cities was slow and it required about 30 minutes to pass from the eastern line of Pittsburg to the western line of Allegheny. At Pittsburg station on the Pennsylvania road, just east of Pittsburg, the engines and crews were replaced by Fort Wayne engines and crews. The change was made there in order to avoid stopping in Pittsburg. The special car with Ohio's state officials and committees, was also attached to the train at Pittsburg. Governor George K. Nash, Lieut. Governor J. A. Caldwell, and Chief Justice Williams, joined the official party on the second section. The face of a heartbroken widow, once the proudest in the land in the love with which her husband, the martyred President, surrounded her, today bowed in sorrow which made none too lowly to do her reverence, peered out of the window of the death train this morning at Pittsburg station, and saw a scene which must have made angels weep. A mighty throng of thousands, with heads bared in the presence of the nation's dead, stood silently and reverently by the train. A band struck up the hymn, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and the host reverently joined in the singing of the grand old hymn. As the music swelled the face of the President's widow appeared at the window of the car she occupied. It was a wan, grief worn face, yet sweet withal, in the depth of her sorrow. Tears streamed from her eyes as she listened a moment to the strains of the favorite hymn, then a friend and martyred husband, then a beloved drew her gently away from the sight of the multitude.

IN CASH

Is the Little Fortune Left by President McKinley—Amount of Insurance is Unknown.

New York, Sept. 18.—A Washington dispatch to the Herald says: "President McKinley has left a fortune of not more than $70,000 and at least $50,000 of that is in the form of cash, which is in the hands of Washington and Canton.

"His fortune, except $12,000, has been accumulated since he was first inaugurated President. The fact that it is in the form of cash shows how jealous the late President was of his reputation.

"He was peculiarly sensitive in regard to his personal integrity and he refused to even invest his savings in government bonds. His fortune is left entirely to his wife. It is understood that Senator Hanna is made executor and is given charge of the income. It cannot be told exactly how much life insurance the President carried."

At 1:30 o'clock all trains on the Pan Handle system, special, passenger, or freight, will come to a dead stop wherever they may be, and remain standing for 10 minutes.

FUNERAL TRAIN AT PITTSBURG.

Pittsburg, Pa., Sept. 18.—The McKinley funeral train arrived at the Union Station at 11:15 o'clock, fifteen minutes later than the schedule time.

AT CINCINNATI

Elaborate Memorial Services Tomorrow—"Post" Suggests that Every Body Stop at 2:30 and Pray.

Cincinnati, Sept. 18.—The memorial services to be held in Music Hall on Thursday morning at 11 o'clock will be of the most elaborate character. Not only will the fall festival be closed, but all business in the city will be suspended. Senator Foraker will deliver the funeral oration. Dr. Davis W. Clark, presiding elder of the Methodist Episcopal church for this district, will lead the prayer service. The great Catholic festival chorus accompanied by the big organ will furnish the music for the solemn occasion. A feature of the musical program will be the rendering of the President's favorite hymns, "Lead Kindly Light," and "Nearer, My God, to Thee."

The Cincinnati Post today suggests that at 2:30 Thursday afternoon all who are on the streets shall bare their heads, stop for a few moments and offer a silent prayer.

CANNOT SUPPLY DEMAND.

Pasadena, N. J., Sept. 18.—A train of 25 cars loaded with black goods was shipped from here to Chicago yesterday. The mills which manufacture black goods, crepe and American flags have been working night and day, but cannot begin to supply the demand.

CARS WILL STOP.

New York, Sept. 18.—During the 10 minutes while the last sad rites are being observed at the grave of President McKinley in Canton, on Thursday every car wheel on the entire Jersey Central railroad system will cease revolving.

The Central officials are waiting for word from Washington announcing the hour of the President's interment before sending out general orders to all employees.

With these orders conductors and engineers of express, local and freight trains alike will bring them to a stop wherever the hour finds them.

Every street car in the boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx controlled by the Metropolitan Street Railway company will also come to a firm stop and remain motionless for five minutes. Orders to this effect have been posted in the car barns of the company.

THURSDAY A HOLIDAY.

New York, Sept. 18.—Justice McAdams of the Supreme Court, has judicially declared that Thursday will be a legal holiday. A sale of property had been fixed for that date and the lawyers interested came before the judge to ascertain whether or not the sale should take place. Justice McAdams says that the proclamation issued by President Roosevelt setting aside Thursday as a day of prayer and mourning, brings the day within the definition of a legal holiday. He therefore directed the referee to adjourn the sale for a week.

IN CASH

Is the Little Fortune Left by President McKinley—Amount of Insurance is Unknown.

New York, Sept. 18.—A Washington dispatch to the Herald says: "President McKinley has left a fortune of not more than $70,000 and at least $50,000 of that is in the form of cash, which is in the hands of Washington and Canton.

"His fortune, except $12,000, has been accumulated since he was first inaugurated President. The fact that it is in the form of cash shows how jealous the late President was of his reputation.

"He was peculiarly sensitive in regard to his personal integrity and he refused to even invest his savings in government bonds. His fortune is left entirely to his wife. It is understood that Senator Hanna is made executor and is given charge of the income. It cannot be told exactly how much life insurance the President carried."

At 1:30 o'clock all trains on the Pan Handle system, special, passenger, or freight, will come to a dead stop wherever they may be, and remain standing for 10 minutes.

THE GOVERNOR'S STAFF.

The majority of the military staff of Governor Nash left for Canton in the private car Tacitus over the C. & C. at 12:40 o'clock this morning. Those in the party were: Colonel Carl J. Hoster, Colonel C. B. Wing, Colonel Melville M. Gillett, Colonel Edward J. Bird, Colonel H. C. Ellison, Colonel G. M. King, John R. Malloy, Secretary of State Laylin and James W. Faulkner. Colonel Jerome Burrows, Charles A. Craighead, Colonel George B. Donovan, Colonel William S. Morgan, General Edmund C. Brush and General George Spitzer and General Farrow are in Europe, Colonel Max Fleischmann is in Canada and General H. C. Taylor is unable to endure the fatigue of the trip.

DR M'BURNEY

Feels Much Hurt by the Charges Made by His Fellow Surgeons at Buffalo.

New York, September 18.—Dr. Chas. M'Burney has positively refused to reply to the charges of his Buffalo associates that he was responsible for the the oversanguine bulletins of the President's condition. Dr. M'Burney said he had read the statements, but flatly refused to discuss them.

It was evident that the criticisms of his fellow physicians had nettled the distinguished surgeon, and that the communicative disposition which he manifested at all times while in Buffalo had left him.

While he refused to make any rejoinder to Dr. Mann and the others who criticized his course it was learned that in private conversation he expressed himself as deeply hurt.

"Why, there was the most beautiful harmony among the physicians all along," he said to a friend.

It is understood that the statement of Dr. Matthew D. Mann, particularly his plea Sunday that the bulletin issued by Dr. M'Burney on Thursday when he was leaving Buffalo was such a misstatement of the case that he was or the point of issuing a signal statement to correct the impression it would create.

TRIBUTE OF W. J. BRYAN TO THE DEAD PRESIDENT.

LINCOLN, NEB., Sept. 18.—A tribute from William J. Bryan to the dead President was given to the Associated Press last evening. Quoting the words of President McKinley, "God's will, not ours, be done," Mr. Bryan recalls the pathetic scenes at the death bed and continued:

"This terrible deed at Buffalo, rudely breaking the ties of family and friendship and horrifying every patriotic citizen, shows a most extraordinary life with a halo that cannot but exalt its victim's place in history. His bravery during the trying ordeal, his forgiving spirit and his fortitude in the final hours, give glimpses of his inner life which nothing less tragic could have revealed.

"But, unexpressed as is the death of McKinley, the illustrious citizen, it is the damnable murder of McKinley the President, that melts seventy million hearts into one and brings a hush to the farm, the factory and the forum. Death is the inevitable incident of every human career. It despises the sword and shield of the warrior and laughs at the precautions suggested by science. Wealth cannot build walls high enough or thick enough to shut it out, and no house is humble enough to escape its visitation. Even love, the most potent force known to man; love, the characteristic which links the human to the divine—even love is powerless in its presence. Its contingency is recognized in the marriage vow, 'until death us do part,' and is written upon friendship's ring. But the death, even when produced by natural causes, of a public servant charged with the tremendous responsibilities which press upon a president, shocks the entire country and is infinitely multiplied when the circumstances attending constitute an attack upon the government itself. No one can estimate the far-reaching effects of such an act as that which now casts a gloom over our land. It shames America in the eyes of the world; it imperils her moral prestige and gives enemies of free government a chance to mock at her, and it excites an indignation which, while righteous in itself, may lead to acts which will partake of the spirit of lawlessness. As the President's death overwhelms all in a common sorrow, so it imposes a common responsibility, namely, to so avenge the wrong done to the President, his family and the country, as to make the executive life secure without bringing insecurity to freedom of speech or freedom of the press."

FEAR COLLAPSE

Friends of Mrs. McKinley are Alarmed Over Her Condition—Dr. Rixey Attending Her.

Canton, O., Sept. 18.—The friends of Mrs. McKinley are seriously alarmed about her. They speak with grave apprehension of the days that are soon to come when she will be borne up no longer by her sense of duty and the sustaining force of her desire to perform her full part in the ceremonies of the national character and tragic end of her husband made appropriate. It is believed that she will be able to go through the services at Canton, but subsequently a collapse is greatly feared. Mrs. McKinley is considerably weaker than when at Buffalo, but continues to bear up with great fortitude, and there is no present sign of collapse. At Washington she gave vent to her grief more freely than at any time since the tragedy, and wept for a long time. Dr. Rixey attended her.

Americans Meet in Paris. Paris, Sept. 18.—By invitation of General Horace Porter, the United States ambassador, the resident and traveling Americans met at his residence to adopt resolutions on the assassination of President McKinley. The attendance was numerous, including many ladies dressed in mourning. General Porter, who was completely recovered from his indisposition, presided at the meeting. Senator Lodge, Secretary Vignaud and Consul General Gowdy were the vice presidents. General Porter, in feeling terms, announced the purpose of the meeting. Senator Lodge, in moving the adoption of the resolutions, eloquently outlined the career of the late president and his administration.

Royal Sympathy. Fredensborg, Denmark, Sept. 18.—King Edward, King Christian, Queen Alexandra and the Empress Dowager of Russia, surrounded by their princely and princesses of their families, personally expressed in special audiences granted to the United States minister, Mr. Swenson, their deep sympathy and indignation at the death of Mr. McKinley. King Edward's closing words to Mr. Swenson were the following: "Convey my heartfelt sympathy for the loss of so grand a man to so great a nation, a man who was so good a friend to Great Britain."

Mourning in Cuba. Tampa, Fla., Sept. 18.—General Wood arrived here en route to Washington. He hoped to arrive in time to attend President McKinley's funeral at Canton. He said he had never seen such universal mourning as was shown in Cuba for the death of Mr. McKinley, and that its extent and manifest sincerity, demonstrating how deeply the Cubans felt, was surprising. General Wood stated that important business with the secretary of war brought him to the states, and that he probably will return to Havana in about a week.

BEGGED FOR MERCY.

Cleveland, Sept. 18.—Gustav Gruber, the barber, who maligned President McKinley the day he was shot, was arraigned in police court today. He wept bitterly. He said he was drunk when he made the remark and said he was a Republican and begged for mercy. He was held under $200 bail.

CABINET

May Remain as it is Now Made Up. Members Asked to Serve Out the Full Term.

Washington, Sept. 18.—At his first cabinet meeting President Roosevelt asked the members of Mr. McKinley's cabinet to retain their respective portfolios throughout his term, and announced that his administration would follow the policy outlined by President McKinley in his Buffalo speech. After the obsequies over the late president's cabinet, at President Roosevelt's request, assembled at the residence of Commander Cowles, the president for the purpose of informing their new chief of the state of affairs in their respective departments. The president addressed his advisers collectively, as he had previously done individually, requesting them all to retain their respective positions.

Upon being asked by a member if resignations should be formally presented in the usual manner, the president answered that his action at this meeting had precluded the necessity of presenting resignations. The discussion turned upon the policy of the administration, and Mr. Roosevelt announced that he regarded the speech of the late president at the Buffalo exposition the day before he was shot as outlining the policies of his own administration. It can not be learned at this time whether or not all the members will be willing to serve the full term.

CABINET TO REMAIN.

Washington, Sept. 18.—It is officially announced today that all the members of McKinley's cabinet will remain for the full term of President Roosevelt's administration so far as human foresight can now determine.

ROOSEVELT'S FRIENDS' DENIAL.

Washington, Sept. 18.—Friends of Roosevelt deny that he ever said he would not be a candidate in 1904, and say that he has never discussed the matter and will not, and that the indifference of such discussion while the late President is still unburied should be sufficient proof that Roosevelt never used the words attributed to him.

IN SOMBRE GARB

Canton Receives the Remains of the President—Closing of a Sad Tragedy—Arrival of Train.

Canton, O., Sept. 18.—The funeral train bearing the remains of the martyred President arrived here at 11:56 this noon, after an eventful run from Washington, where the nation had officially paid tribute to the memory of the beloved dead. A large and distinguished party accompanied the remains. Everywhere along the route were crowds of people to meet the train. Leaving Washington at 8:20 Tuesday night, the train, which consisted of 29 cars, in sections, was reverently greeted at every stop far into the night, the largest assemblies being at Baltimore and Harrisburg. At Pittsburg, in the early morning, the same scenes were repeated. (Continued on page 2.)

TRIAL

OF ASSASSIN CZOLGOSZ IS SET FOR MONDAY.

PRISONER INSTANTLY FEIGNING INSANITY.

CASE GOES TO SUPREME COURT.

Assassin Again Held His Peace, Uttering Not a Word in Reply to Judge or Counsel, so a Plea of Not Guilty Was Entered—Missed by Lobby—Childhood of Czolgosz.

Buffalo, Sept. 18.—The assassin of President McKinley, Leon P. Czolgosz, was arraigned before Judge Edward K. Emery on the indictment of murder in the first degree in fatally shooting President McKinley in the Temple of Music at the Pan-American exposition, on Sept. 6. Again the stubborn prisoner refused to plead or even to utter a word or sound, and the Hon. Loren L. Lewis, ex-supreme court justice, entered a plea of not guilty. The accused will be tried in the supreme court next Monday morning. He is evidently shamming insanity.

The incident of the day was the bissing of the prisoner by the crowd who surged around him as he was being escorted down the stairs still draped in mourning garb. The strong guard of patrolmen and deputy sheriffs had been dispensed with, so that the people were able to get nearer the prisoner as he passed to and from the courtroom.

As a result of the urging of President Adelbert Moot of the Erie County Bar association, Judge Lewis, one of the attorneys assigned as counsel by Judge Emery, called at the Erie county jail to see the prisoner. Czolgosz refused to talk to Judge Lewis and even refused to answer questions as to whether or not he wanted any counsel. Judge Lewis said that nevertheless would appear for the prisoner upon arraignment, even if he decided not to accept the assignment of the court.

Childhood of Czolgosz. Potosky, Mich., Sept. 18.—The attempt to trace the lineage of Czolgosz recalls the connection of his father with the Molter murder mystery, which shocked Michigan 25 years ago. The elder Czolgosz was one of the colonists in Presque Isle county, ruled over by Henry Molter, who was an illegitimate son of King Louis of Wurtemberg, who fled Germany under sentence of death. Stung to desperation by Molter's tyranny and a vice, a band of the colonists poured a volley of shots through the window of the company store on Aug. 16, 1876, killing Molter. The principal actors in this tragedy were sentenced to prison for life, but were subsequently pardoned. Amid such surroundings Assassin Czolgosz was born and reared.

MRS. GARFIELD ILL. Mentor, O., Sept. 18.—It is said by neighbors that Mrs. Garfield is ill and seriously prostrated by the news of the assassination of President McKinley. The family, however, while admitting that she is ill, deny that her illness is of a serious nature.

ATTACK ON MINES.

Nadisonville, Ky., Sept. 18.—An attack was made on the Reinecke mines this morning. About 200 shots were exchanged between the attacking party and the guards. Three shots struck the mine secretary's office. The mines are not running today as the non-union men are intimidated. No one was hurt.

PROBABLE APPOINTMENTS.

Washington, Sept. 18.—It is believed that among Roosevelt's first official acts will be the appointment of Dr. Rixey surgeon of the navy, and of W. P. Ridgely of Illinois to be comptroller of the currency. If those appointments are made it will be simply to carry out the promises of McKinley.

STORM IS RAGING.

Norfolk, Sept. 18.—A severe storm with prospects for a hurricane before tomorrow is now raging off the Virginia and Carolina coasts. Many vessels are running into Hampton roads hourly out of the gale. The North Atlantic squadron is safely at anchor off Old Point Comfort, Va.

AN EARTHQUAKE.

Inverness, Scotland, Sept. 18.—A severe earthquake shocked this city at 1:30 this morning. The people, greatly alarmed, waited the streets in scanty clothes, afraid to return to their homes. A second shock, while not so severe as the first, nevertheless caused a number of chimneys to fall.

ROOSEVELT AND TARIFF REFORM

(Chicago Chronicle.)

President McKinley hastened to assure the cabinet that his aim would be "to continue absolutely unbroken the policy of President McKinley for the peace and prosperity of our beloved country."

Someone else has hastened to say that what the new President meant was that he would take the party platform for his guide and not deviate from that in any respect. The evident meaning of this is that the politician who so expressed himself did not wish Mr. Roosevelt to pursue the course with respect to our foreign commerce which Mr. McKinley clearly indicated that he intended to pursue in the speech which he made the day before the assault was made upon his person. He wished to point out that in pledging himself to pursue the policy which Mr. McKinley had indicated his intention of pursuing in future.

Repeatedly since the winter of 1898-99 Mr. McKinley has let fall expressions from which it could be inferred that his extreme protectionist ideas were undergoing modification. Two years and a half ago he told an audience of commercial men in Boston that we were no longer talking about tariff rates, but were seeking foreign markets for our products. Since then he has been frequently quoted as favoring the reciprocity treaties negotiated by Mr. Kassar, and in some of his public utterances he has spoken favorably of such treaties.

He did not fairly commit himself to a general policy of freer trade relations with the outside world and to the underlying economic principles which logically conduct to perfectly free trade until he made his speech of the 5th of September at Buffalo. Mr. Roosevelt is entirely free to say, therefore, that in pledging himself to pursue the policy of his predecessor he did not pledge himself to pursue Mr. McKinley's new departure. There is reason to believe that he will not follow in the footsteps of his predecessor in this respect. His personal and political intimacies have been such as to indicate that he is inclined to affiliate with the uncompromising and unyielding tariff extremists of his party.

Whatever his personal views, it is understood that he is ambitious to reach the Presidential chair by election to attempt to lead his party in a new departure on the tariff question even if he so inclined. Mr. McKinley had put the third-term temptation behind him and would have risked no political future in making such an attempt.

He was in a position where he could to that with some hope of succeeding and at the same time avoiding an irreparable rupture in his party. He is as long been identified with the extreme protectionists, having been their acknowledged leader for a dozen years, and he could hope to bring them around to a more enlightened policy.

Mr. Roosevelt enjoys no such advantage as he should have in following the course to which Mr. McKinley committed himself in his Buffalo speech he would be denounced by the leaders and organs of his own party as Andrew Johnson was, and as Tyler and Fillmore were denounced by the Whigs.

Mr. Roosevelt is politician enough to know this, and he is too ambitious to break with his party. If he were as much a free trader by conviction as Garfield undoubtedly was he would not destroy his political future by forcing the fighting for a more liberal tariff policy. There may be fighting, but Roosevelt will not lead it.

Too High a Price to Pay.

(Baltimore News.)
It may be un-American for a President of the United States to avoid promiscuous assemblages, but it is a significant fact that President Carnot, King Humbert and Mr. McKinley were all three struck down in the midst of a crowd. Such a price is too high to pay even for the distinction of being an American of the Americans, and it ought not to be exacted of our chief executive until better provision is made for his security.

PARTY AMENITIES AND ETHICS

As Defined by Charles Dick of the Republican State Executive Committee.

TOO INTENT UPON SECURING THE OFFICES

To Respectfully Consider the Letter of Chairman Daugherty Proposing a Quiet Campaign on Account of President McKinley's Condition.

One of the most remarkable chapters of party history in Ohio was written last week when the assiduous attempt of an anarchist to assassinate President McKinley, and it remained for General Charles Dick, the Republican chairman, to seize upon it for partisan and electioneering purposes.

On Friday, September 6, within 20 minutes after the attempted assassination, the Democratic committee sent the following telegram:

"Mrs. President McKinley, Buffalo, N. Y.:
"We join with the whole nation in our profound sympathy for you and the president in the great trouble which has come upon you.
"M. A. DAUGHERTY, Chairman,
"C. F. GILLIAM, Secretary,
"Democratic State Executive Committee."

A few minutes later the following was sent out by the executive committee through the Associated Press to all parts of the Union:

"We are not acquainted with the details of the affair, but it is needless to say how profoundly shocked and horrified the officers and members of the Democratic state executive committee were by the news of the attempted assassination of President McKinley."

"Whatever our political differences may be, they do not detract in the slightest from our regard for McKinley as a man or the high honor and esteem we hold for him as the chief magistrate of the nation, to whom every loyal citizen looks up with respect as their chosen ruler."

"M. A. DAUGHERTY, Chairman,
"C. F. GILLIAM, Secretary,
"Democratic State Executive Committee."

Colonel James Kilbourne, the Democratic nominee for governor, was profoundly shocked when told of the shooting of the president. He had long known President McKinley, and long known President McKinley, and to him it was the striking down of a friend, not alone of the head of the government. In speaking of the deed, Colonel Kilbourne said:

"The president's death at this time, even from natural causes, would be a great misfortune to the country. If he should die from the attack of the assassin it would be a national calamity. I rejoice, as must all his countrymen, that the latest report gives hope of his recovery."

This is preliminary to what followed between the two state committees. Animated by the lofty spirit expressed in his telegrams above, Chairman Daugherty, while there were still grave and serious doubts of the president's recovery, and a certainty that a painful and tedious convalescence, at best, would follow, addressed the following note to Chairman Dick:

"Columbus, O., Sept. 9, 1901.
"Hon. Charles W. Dick, Chairman Republican State Committee, Columbus, Ohio:
"My Dear Sir—Ohio is the home of President McKinley, and the recent attempt at his assassination has aroused the indignation and horror not only of all the citizens of his own state, irrespective of party, but of the nation as well."

"It is the hope and prayer of all the people that he may be speedily restored to health and resume the performance of the duties of his high office."

"The Democratic state executive committee believes that both political parties in Ohio can best manifest the great respect which they entertain for the president, both personally and officially, and their sincere wishes for his recovery, by omitting political meetings from the conduct of the campaign."

"I, therefore, on behalf of the Democrats of the state, propose to you that each committee withdraw all announcements already made for such meetings, and that no political addresses be delivered by speakers of either party at any time preceding the election. I understand that a similar proposal was made by the Democratic committee in Ohio in the year Garfield was assassinated, and that the same was accepted by the then Republican committee. Awaiting your reply, I beg to subscribe myself, very respectfully yours,

"M. A. DAUGHERTY, Chairman."

Nothing more chivalrous or more becoming to the official representative of a great party, in the hour of the grief, anxiety and doubt of the nation, could be conceived than this letter of the Democratic chairman, seeking to ally all partisan animosities in the native state of the stricken president while awaiting the result of his cruel wounds.

How was it received by the official representative of the Republican organization? Not in the spirit in which it was written, but in the spirit of the partisan who appeared to be ready, if not anxious, to turn a great crime and a great public calamity to political account.

In a long letter, bristling in every paragraph with partisanship, he bluntly refused to listen to the proposition submitted to him. He calls attention to the fact that when the Democratic committee in 1881, when President Garfield was assassinated, Governor Nash, who was then chairman, rejected it with a partisan slogan and an appeal to party prejudices, as Dick did this year. General Dick speaks of its being dishonest "for McKinley's friends in his own state to abandon the contest," as though the voters are not capable of expressing their judgment at the polls, without passing through the bitterness of the ordinary campaign under existing circumstances.

Then follows a specimen of unparalleled insolence and partisan vulgarity in these words:

"If it seems best to your committee to withdraw from antagonizing those principles and to cease from further advocacy of political doctrines which the president has always believed to be perilous to the prosperity of the entire country we shall be very glad indeed to be advised to that effect and to have your hearty co-operation hereafter in the maintenance of more wholesome public policies."

Then he expresses the hope that we will have a "clean" campaign, and one free from "aspirations" and "unwarranted personalities."

That is the kind of campaign the Democrats conducted up to the hour of the attempted assassination, and there will be no variation from it hereafter; but what may we expect from the man who seeks to make political capital out of existing conditions, and who turned Mr. Daugherty's high-minded proposal aside with cynical contempt and insult, for reasons plain to any intelligent man?

Hon. M. A. Daugherty, chairman of the Democratic state committee, commenting in detail upon Chairman Dick's reply to his request for an abandonment of the speaking campaign in Ohio out of respect to President McKinley, says:

"I shall not reply to the letter of Mr. Dick. Of course, I do not question his right to decline our proposal for any reason which might commend itself to his judgment. That privilege we must and do cheerfully concede to him. However, I was much surprised to receive an answer consisting so largely of political dissertation on campaign issues."

"The suggestion that the Democratic committee might, if it so desired, abandon its principles was quite gratuitous, and marred the otherwise courteous tone of his letter. We were not seeking Republican advice along that line. But I suppose mercenary politics measures the conduct of men by its own questionable standard even in the presence of the great calamity which has befallen the nation."

"It will occur to thinking men that Mr. Dick was equally unfortunate in his reference to the protective policy which it was supposed the president stood for. If he had read the last public utterance delivered by the president at Buffalo before his attempted assassination he could easily have discerned a change of mind on the part of the president himself on that subject. Although vetted under the term 'reciprocity,' it is nevertheless a complete abandonment of the protective system. For reciprocity, while not free trade by operation of law, is free trade accomplished by contract stipulations between nations."

Eczema for Forty Years.

The Unqualified Statement of a Well Known Attorney, St. Ignace, Mich.

Some of the cures made by Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment of stubborn and long continued eczema and skin diseases are causing much comment. People are beginning to realize that this Ointment is a wonder worker with all kinds of skin trouble.

Attorney James J. Brown, St. Ignace, Michigan, writes as follows:

Dr. A. W. Chase
Med. Co., Buffalo, N. Y.—Gents:—I cannot refrain from expressing my acknowledgement for the relief I have felt from Dr. Chase's Ointment.

For 40 years I was afflicted with a skin disease which was located in one spot—on my leg. I have spent at a rough estimate five hundred dollars trying to effect a cure, and not until I applied this ointment did I feel relief. You are strangers to me and this letter is prompted directly because I want to say and I feel as though I ought to say it. That Chase's ointment has effected a complete cure of my affliction. Three boxes did the work on my leg. I was also suffering from itching piles and applied the ointment which gave the best of satisfaction by affording me rest at night and rapidly causing the disease to disappear. I have received such relief and comfort from the ointment that I cannot withhold expressing my gratitude. I was so long afflicted with the tortures of eczema. I feel now that I am cured, a word of recommendation is due from me. Yours truly,

JAMES J. BROWN.

SENATOR JONES' SEAT.

Warm Contest Formally Opened Down in Arkansas.

Stearcy, Ark., Sept. 18.—The campaign for the United States senatorship was formally opened here with Senator James K. Jones, who is chairman of the national committee, and ex-Governor James P. Clark as the candidates. Ex-Governor Clark charged Senator Jones with having stock to the amount of $350,000 in the alleged round bale cotton trust, and produced a certificate showing that Senator Jones voted that much stock at the meeting of the company. In reply Senator Jones said he owned $170,000 of common stock which had yielded him no returns, and that the $350,000 of stock voted by him represented his own holdings and those of his associates whose proxies he held. The two candidates will protect to the hilt the state, making speeches daily at various places. Their claims will be passed upon at Democratic primary election to be held in March.

Mexico Prosperous.

City of Mexico, Sept. 18.—President Diaz opened congress, reading a long message showing that Mexico's foreign relations are of the most satisfactory character, and that Austria and Mexico have renewed their former relations. Guatemala observes a satisfactory attitude in regard to Mexican citizens, and nowhere is the political horizon of the country cloudy. The president notes continued growth of the mining industry. The postal department shows a remarkable increase in receipts and amount of matter handled. Business conditions have now so improved that money is abundant and enterprises have received no check. Army reforms have been increased continually, and Mexico is rapidly becoming a military power of importance.

Entertaining the Duke.

Quebec, Sept. 18.—The ceremonies of the last day's stay of the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York in the ancient capital of Canada included a review of the troops mobilized for their reception, a dinner on the royal yacht Ophir and an illumination of the harbor and city. Rain fell almost incessantly and the crowds that gathered were speedily dispersed and driven indoors. The luncheon and general reception at Spencerwood, the official residence of the lieutenant governor, was marred by a mark of respect to the dead American president, and further plans for an expression of regret were made but eventually abandoned.

Weather and Crops.

Washington, Sept. 18.—The weather bureau, in its summary of weather crop conditions for the week ended Sept. 16, says: Heavy rains have proved unfavorable in the central and western gulf states, in portions of the Ohio valley and Tennessee and upper Missouri valley, while crops have suffered from drought in the south Atlantic coast districts. East of the Rocky mountains the temperature conditions have been favorable except in the upper Missouri valley, where it has been too cool, and frosts were of quite general occurrence, in some instances damaging, in the plateau regions.

Children Murdered.

Grantsburg, Miss., Sept. 18.—Three children of Mr. Bawley at Lang's Dam were murdered while the parents were absent, and the house was fired to destroy evidence of the crime. The victims were a girl of 16, a boy of 8 and another of 4 years. Suspicion points very strongly toward a half-breed as the perpetrator of the crime. He has been in love with the girl for some time, but she did not return his affection. An inquest showed that the girl had been outraged and then murdered, her throat being cut, while the skulls of the younger children had been crushed.

Trolley Cars Collide.

Indianapolis, Sept. 18.—By the collision of a Columbia avenue car with a Brightwood car W. C. Howard and Albert Teasing were seriously injured and a number of passengers sustained painful bruises. Howard and young Teasing were standing on the running board of the Columbia avenue car and were thrown to the pavement. Teasing fell under the car and his foot was caught and crushed and broken in two places.

Ugly Charges.

Knoxville, Sept. 18.—Alexander Miller of Meat Springs, N. C., a returned Philippine soldier, is in jail at Mountain City charged with shooting Marion Wilson and his father, J. J. Wilson. The latter is fatally wounded. Miller escaped to the mountains but was caught by a posse.

Brakes Needed For The Middle Aged

As one approaches the middle milepost in life he must adjust himself to changing conditions. He must then, if ever, realize the importance of elimination, OF EATING LESS AND WORKING LESS. In other words, as he advances along down the hill of life he should cultivate an ability to put on the brakes, be satisfied to do less work, but better work—indeed DO LESS OF EVERYTHING AND TRY TO DO IT BETTER.

By Dr.
I. N. LOVE
Of
New York

You ask, When is the middle milepost reached? It varies in different individuals. It ranges from the fortieth to the sixtieth birthday. Some men by inheritance and others by habits of life have moved more rapidly than others toward this point. It has been said that a woman is as old as she looks and a man as old as he feels, but as a matter of fact both are as old as their arteries. In other words, the elasticity of their arteries and other parts of their structures is an expression of their youthfulness.

On general principles one at this time should make no radical change in the habits of living.

IT IS A GREAT MISTAKE TO ATTEMPT TO REDUCE RAPIDLY AN ACCUMULATION OF FAT WHICH IS THE RESULT OF YEARS OF EXCESSIVE EATING AND LACK OF PROPER EXERCISE.

A man of 50 should limit his diet to almost half what it was when he was 30 or during the growing period. He should drink large quantities of water, for water is the greatest eliminator of accumulating poisons. If you would wish to wash out the earthly materials which tend toward stiffness and brittleness of the arteries and joints, use the greatest solvent of earthly salts we have—namely, PURE WATER.

A judicious amount of exercise should be indulged in. Excessive athletics is always objectionable to the young and the old as well. Free indulgence in walking out in the open air is excellent. The city streets will do for this. Horseback riding is good. All of these should be indulged temperately and the increase gradual.

Temperance in all things is the great essential. Radical abstinence either in diet or drink is not called for, but I do believe that as we approach the middle of life the use of alcohol should be diminished rather than increased, and unless this can be done gracefully alcohol should be ruled out altogether.

A man as he approaches middle life needs some stimulant or nerve bracer. Probably tobacco, judiciously indulged, is the least harmful.

BUT IN EXCESS I BELIEVE IT IS MORE DANGEROUS THAN ALCOHOL BECAUSE IT IS MORE RESPECTABLE AND HARDER TO AVOID.

I would sum up the essentials along these lines or for this period: Cultivate temperance in all things, cheerfulness, optimism, the ability to move gracefully along the lines of least resistance, the disposition to avoid obstruction and friction, the appreciation of fun, but not frivolity, and AN EVER ABIDING LOVE FOR ALL THE WORLD.

The American Conscience Is All Right—But It's Asleep

It is consoling to know that notwithstanding our failure to discharge our civic duties many of the currents of our national life flow smoothly on, for the daily and obscure labors of the vast majority of our fellow citizens continue year after year in all the different phases of our national existence.

The laborers themselves have been sowing and reaping, working steadily at the tasks appointed them, taking the sunshine and the rain, mutely enduring the sufferings and the burdens given them to bear, and acquitting themselves worthily as good men and women ought to do.

Daily confronting of the daily task and doing it with patience, contentment and courage are as true today as ever, while it is also true that the recompense of such deserving labors, while less proportionately, is actually far greater in all measures, material and spiritual, than ever before, so that after all abatement we may regard the past with abundant gratitude and the future with absolute confidence, while on the threshold of the new century it is still true that THE HAPPIEST OF POLITICAL FORTUNES IS TO BE AN AMERICAN CITIZEN, and that fortune is sure to grow happier "with the process of the suns." The present paralysis of our moral courage, our present cowardly toleration of loathsome corruption and its kindred evils, which seem to seriously threaten our peace; our present animal lust for blood, and the general degradation of the national spirit, will prove to be only temporary evils and will soon pass away, for THE AMERICAN CONSCIENCE IS NOT DEAD, BUT SLEEPETH, and, even if we do not, our children will return to the old ways and the old faith. Let me repeat once more those inspired words of the first great American: "The nation shall under God have a new birth of freedom, and government of the people, by the people and for the people shall not perish from the earth."

AN ACCOMPLISHED CUBAN Eulogizes Peruna as an Efficacious Catarrh Cure.

Gonzalo De Quesada, Secretary of the Cuban Legation in Washington.

Senor Quesada, Secretary of the Cuban Legation in Washington, is an orator born. In an article in The Outlook for July, 1899, by George Kennan, who heard Quesada speak at the Esteban Theatre, Matanzas, Cuba, he said: "I have seen many audiences under the spell of eloquent speech and in the grip of strong emotional excitement, but I have rarely witnessed such a scene as at the close of Quesada's eulogy upon the dead patriot, Martí." In a letter to The Peruna Medicine Company, written from Washington, D. C., Senor Quesada says:

"Peruna I can recommend as a very good medicine. It is an excellent strengthening tonic, and it is also an efficacious cure for the almost universal complaint of catarrh."

Peruna does not operate upon the system as the usual remedy does. It is not a local treatment. It operates as a systemic remedy. It gives tone to the weakened nerve centers, and thus gives tone to the mucous membranes that line the various organs of the body.

Catarrh is always located in some mucous membrane. Catarrh is a flabby condition of the blood vessels of these membranes. Peruna gives tone to these vessels and restores them to their natural elasticity.

Miss Martha Wittkopp writes from Greenville, Mich., the following: "When I began your treatment I had catarrh of the head, nose, throat, stomach and pelvic organs. I was troubled with hawking and spitting, caught cold very easily, had almost constant headache. My stomach was all out of order, I did not sleep well, and was more tired in the morning than when I retired. I had backache and was very nervous, in fact, the catarrh had permeated my entire system, and I almost despaired of getting well."

"I wrote you for advice and you advised Peruna. I began to gain right along, and am now well. My parents praise Peruna very much. As for myself, I can't speak well enough of it. I am well and happy and enjoy my life as I never have before. I cannot remember when I have felt as well as I do now."

Congressman J. H. Bankhead, of Alabama, one of the most influential members of the House of Representatives, in a letter written from Washington, D. C., gives his endorsement to the great catarrh remedy, Peruna, in the following words:

"Your Peruna is one of the best medicines I ever tried, and no family should be without your remarkable remedy. As a tonic and a catarrh cure I know of nothing better."

Address The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O., for a free copy of "Summer Catarrh." This book treats exclusively of diseases peculiar to hot weather, is profusely illustrated and should be in the hands of every person suffering with any form of summer catarrh.

The Police Court.

William Bolton was arrested Tuesday evening on a very serious charge, preferred by 'Ras White, who charged him with picking his pocket, stealing a pocket book containing between two and three dollars.

It seems that Bolton and White met and went into Wolf & Kern's place on West Main street, White paying for what was ordered. He ordered a bowl of soup for Bolton and when he felt in his pocket for the money to pay for it, his pocket book was gone. The proprietor, Mr. Wolf, seized Bolton, and the pocket book was taken away from him, but the money was gone.

Mr. White is positive that he had two $1 bills in the book, and some change, and in this he is corroborated by Mr. Wolf. Bolton says he found the pocket book on the floor, and submitted to a search at the city prison this morning, removing his clothes, but nothing was found on him. Lon Bradford was arrested with Bolton, but Mr. White declared that he was absolutely innocent. The hearing was postponed.

John Hudson, an old soldier, and Eva Shultze were arrested for being drunk on the streets. The old man was discharged while the Shultze woman was fined $1 and costs.

A Study of Political Hysterics.

"A Most Lamentable Comedy," is the title of a powerful novelette by Mr. William Allen White, which begins in the September 21 issue of The Saturday Evening Post, of Philadelphia. This absorbing serial is a study of political hysteria—the story of a state gone mad. The scene of the novelette is a Western State laboring under the burdens of a panic year. The central figure is a grocery store demagogue, whose harebrained oratory captures the State convention. The story rises to a height of dramatic power and intensity rarely equalled in the fiction of the day.

"I feel that it would be a benefit for those with defective eyes to know the experience I have had with mine. For many years I have been nearly blind in one eye and the other was defective. Physicians decided they could do nothing for me and advised me to go to a very prominent oculist in Cleveland. After having examined my case he informed me that one eye was beyond all hope. He improved the sight of the other eye slightly with a glass, but the results were on the whole very unsatisfactory. Having consulted what was supposed to be the best talent in this country, I was forced to believe that I would have to live the balance of my life in comparative blindness, a thought quite horrifying to me. One day I happened into the office of our probate judge, who was having a pair of glasses fitted by Dr. J. N. Hoyt. The gratification and delight expressed by the Judge when the Doctor had completed the examination gave me a new ray of hope and I requested him to examine mine. In ten minutes he brought out the vision in both my eyes so that I could read the finest print at the proper distance with ease. I can see as clearly with the eye pronounced beyond all hope as though it had never been defective. How can I but feel grateful to Dr. Hoyt? I would say that he is one of those fortunate gentlemen who have made a correct selection of a profession, as he certainly is a born artist in his line. He is also a graduate of the Chicago Ophthalmic College and Hospital—a man of very extensive practice and an honorable gentleman.

U. K. GUTHREY,
Auditor of Marion County.

MEN WHO MAY RISE TO NATIONAL IMPORTANCE.

Three men, Frederick W. Holls, William J. Youngs and Nicholas Murray Butler, will, it is believed, become national figures of importance during the administration of President Theodore Roosevelt. In the past Colonel Roosevelt has always sought their advice when confronted with difficult problems, and he trusts them implicitly. All of them have firm faith in his capabilities.

The first of the three, Frederick W. Holls, is comparatively little known.

Mr. Holls, it is said, can have the United States Attorney Generalship providing Mr. Knox insists upon retiring from the cabinet. He has given much study to educational matters and during Mr. Roosevelt's term as Governor was chairman of the special committee appointed to bring about the unification of the educational systems of the state.

Mr. Holls was appointed by President McKinley as General Secretary of the United States Commission to the Peace Congress at The Hague.

When the International Court of Arbitration was formed as a result of the Congress, Mr. Holls was chosen as the United States member.

Because of the character of his work at The Hague, the Czar of Russia sent a personal invitation to Mr. Holls to visit him at the imperial palace, Peterhof. During the visit the Czar questioned Mr. Holls at considerable length about the United States. Mr. McKinley, Mr. Roosevelt and the Spanish war.

Mr. Holls is an independent Republican. He left the regular organization because of dissatisfaction with the methods of Senator Platt.

Cases of Biphtheria.

Some time ago the Advocate published a short interview with Health Officer Day regarding the rumors and quarantining of contagious diseases in which the Doctor complained of the negligence of many of the attending physicians. The Sanitary Policeman, Mr. Daniel Gormley, was seen this morning by an Advocate reporter, and in speaking of this interview said that he was just now investigating a case where there are four cases of diphtheria, and two of them very serious, and no report has been made in a single case.

EMBLEMS

By Barry Pain.

"This," said the commander in chief, "is the very devil. I had it at the last invasion, three months ago, and I told one of your girls to clean it and put it away in the boxroom. Here is another invasion expected tomorrow. It is my duty to lead my troops into the field and repel it. I cannot do that without my sword. Therefore if it is not found the troops will not be led, the invasion will not be repelled, and it will be all over with this small but attractive principality."

"Tinkety-tinkety-tink went the bell. 'Excuse me, sir,' said the house parlorer, 'but that's the front.'"

"Never mind that," said the commander in chief. "You go and have another hunt for that sword. I'll answer the bell myself."

He found on the doorstep his old friend, the lord chief justice, a complacent gentleman with an expression that betokened the very gravest anxiety.

"How do, BHF?" said the lord chief justice. "I'm in the deuce of a mess. I've lost the seal, the great seal, without which no death warrant is valid."

"Dear me, James, that's very unfortunate! How—er—does it affect things?"

"Criminals cannot be executed without a death warrant, and the death warrant is not valid without the seal, which it is my duty to affix. Already one determined villain, with seventeen asserted murders proved against him, has had to be set free. He makes no secret that he intends to murder the cross examining counsel, the commander in chief and—"

"Stop!" cried the commander in chief. "This is serious. This won't do at all, you know. Can you not at least keep this inhuman villain in custody until the great seal is found?"

"Certainly not," said the lord chief justice. "The man was not condemned to imprisonment. He was condemned to death. Without the great seal I am powerless. Tomorrow you gain fresh laurels by repelling with your customary alacrity the invaders of our country, while I—"

"Then you have not heard. I cannot repeat anything. I have lost my sword!"

"But it is of no practical value. The another or repel without it?"

"Quite incorrect! Not to be thought of! No, James, my old friend, we are ruined! When the king hears that I have lost my sword and that you have lost the great seal, in spite of the strong personal friendship which he feels for both of us he must as a despotism monarch, with constitutional inclinations, order our instant execution!"

"This afternoon the king will, as is his habit, be playing a set of pingpong with the prime minister. We will present ourselves then and throw ourselves upon his mercy."

As the commander in chief and the lord chief justice were ushered into the king's presence they caught the fatal words, "stane—and saut!" It was the prime minister's set and practically his sentence of death! But it was too late to withdraw now.

The king had risen from the table and was looking on in good humor, for the young as an example of what a little boy can do. Some of his old habits of speech still clung to him. He advanced, rubbing his hands.

"And what can I have the pleasure of showing you this morning?"

"Your clemency and your forgiveness," said the lord chief justice, and he narrated the misfortunes which had befallen him and his companion.

"Ah," said the king. "I am afraid I cannot give you just exactly what you ask. But we have another article. No one who has tried it has ever expressed any dissatisfaction afterward. It's just plain death. Executioner, forward!"

"One moment," said the lord chief justice. "For this purpose it is necessary to assume the royal robes and crown. We are sorry to trouble your majesty."

"No trouble. Quite correct. My mistake entirely. Let me see, now. The royal robes are on the umbrella stand in the hall. As for the crown—where, where on earth did I put that crown?"

It was of course. The small but comfortably appointed palace was searched from roof to basement, but no crown could be found and without the crown it was constitutionally impossible for the king to act as king. He was an intelligent man and the first to acknowledge this fact.

"Let me see, now," he said. "How does this work out? The throne can only be vacated by my death. Therefore no other king can be appointed. I cannot be king in the absence of the crown. Subjects are only subjects when they have a king. Therefore constitutionally this dominion but such spiritual union does not exist."

No more to do. And that shows what an awful state the strictly correct, absolutely legal and the purely constitutional may reduce one to—Black and White.

AMUSEMENTS.

Hamlet Next Monday.

The Advocate takes pleasure in announcing the coming of Mr. Robert B. Mantell, than whom no more eminent actor is now on the American stage, accompanied by a company of unusual strength and merit, in a repertoire of high class romantic drama and Shakespearean plays, which we understand, are staged in a manner never before attempted. Mr. Mantell, who never fails to receive the support which true merit deserves, will be seen here at his best. His selection of plays are good and his support and recommendation are of the best. His engagement here will undoubtedly be one of the theatrical events of the season. Mr. Mantell comes to Newark on Monday, September 23. He will present Hamlet at the Auditorium that night.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.

Manager Rosebraugh has a menu this season that contains many theatrical delicacies, which will meet with the approbation of those fussy and critical. Al W. Martin's $30,000 revival of Uncle Tom's Cabin, which is undecorated for Friday, September 20, is one of the palatable ones. No doubt many who have witnessed minor productions(?) of the play, and have been successfully bunched by barnstorming aggregations, will be a trifle timid, having formed an idea that because once deceived it must be so always. That would be a poor answer to a question. Because you happened to be a lover of the canvas back, until some incapable chef prepared the fowl in an unwholesome manner, should you imagine that you would receive the same at Delmonico's? Theatrical managers and chefs might be classed under the same heading—they serve public fancy and palate, and must be careful scholars of the art if they choose to hold patrons. Uncle Tom's Cabin has been "done" in museums at the rate of ten times a day, and on one night stands in an hour and a half by five or six people. Being public property anyone who thought they could make a few dollars out of it, has "produced" the play and this city as well as the country at large has suffered from the infliction. On the other hand it has been brought to a scale of magnificence by Al W. Martin that has caused press, public and pulpit to sing loud its praise. Taking the piece as it was originally, Mr. Martin gives it a dressing of complete and realistic scenery, put the principal roles in the hands of competent actors, engaged a number of negroes to add to the pictures and sing and dance in the levee scenes—in fact has done everything to make the performance acceptable to the public. The company which Mr. Martin will bring to our city is said to number one hundred people, while the scenery and stock are of such quantity that three sixty foot cars are required for its transportation.

The magnificent Irish spectacle "The Evil Eye," which has been repeatedly noticed in the Advocate for the past few days, opens a two nights engagement at the Auditorium tonight. Large audiences are assured.

He was on his way to work, and was riding on his wheel, when he struck an obstruction in the road and was thrown to the ground. At first it was thought that he had been seriously injured, but an examination of his injuries showed that he had sustained no broken bones. Although badly bruised, he proceeded to work.

COMPANY G

LEAVES FOR CANTON TO ATTEND
PRESIDENT'S FUNERAL.Men Go in Heavy Marching Order
Under Capt. Crawford's Command—Start Home Friday.

In heavy marching order Company G, 4th regiment, of this city under command of Captain G. Cary Crawford, left on B. & O. No. 17 at 8:23 this morning for Mt. Vernon, where they took a C. & A. C. train for Canton, where they will go into camp with the National Guard, and attend the funeral of President McKinley Thursday.

Major Elmer Blizzard of the Third Battalion, 4th regiment, Captain W. H. Knauss, and Captain Carlos B. Allen, of Colonel Potter's staff, went with the company.

The men marched from the armory on South Fourth street to the depot.

There will be about 5500 troops in camp at Canton, and the men will be in active service, receiving the same pay as if called to riot or any other special duty.

The company carried one day's rations and will leave Canton Friday morning.

ANOTHER INJUNCTION.

Carl Norpell this morning filed a petition in the Common Pleas Court to restrain the Columbus, Buckeye Lake and Newark Traction company from constructing its track closer than 19 feet from the corner of Second and Church streets, and from laying their tracks closer than 30 feet from the west side of North Second street. Judge Jones granted a temporary injunction in the case.

"Thank You."

How many boys and girls think of saying "Thank you" for the hours mother spends mending their torn clothes or for her care of them when they are sick or for any of the little sacrifices she is making all the time? If they want any help on their lessons, mother gives it as a matter of course, and they usually forget that it is anything for which to thank her. They take it for granted that whatever they want mother will give them if she possibly can. And so she will, but her willingness and her love and her unselfishness are no excuse for their being ungrateful and discourteous.—Happy Hours.

Timid Tottie.

"Will you walk in the garden, my pretty wee maid?"
"No, thank you, kind sir; I am too much afraid."
"Why, what you fear is a puzzle to me?"
"Oh, sir, the snapdragons might snap out at me!"
"Oh, I will protect you, my pretty wee maid. Come, put on your bonnet." "Oh, sir, I'm afraid."
"Pray, what is it now?" "Why, I never could go, for a big tiger lily might bite me, you know."
"We'll walk in the fields, then, my pretty wee maid!"
"Oh, that would be worse! I shall feel so afraid."
"What makes you so timid, you strange little child?"
"Why, sir, in the meadows the flowers are all wild!"
—Cassell's Little Folks.

"No Book Larkin."

"How many times did you vote in the recent election?" asked the judge. The prisoner was silent.
"Answer the question! How many times did you vote?"
"Married Tom," said the prisoner, addressing the judge, "and I know you know me long enough to know that I don't know nuffin 'bout 'rithmetic?"—Atlanta Constitution.

Man For Girl to Show.

"Avoid him," said the girl in blue as the man in the summer suit passed them.

"Why?" asked the girl in gray.
"He's too earnest and too unsophisticated," answered the girl in blue.
"Why, he's the kind of a man who will ruin what might be a lovely summer flirtation by proposing to you within the first two weeks of the season."

Late Advice.

"You lost your four fingers by running that buzz saw, did you? Why don't you go into some other occupation? I should think you had had warning on that."
"Oh, sir, you don't think I'll ever have them fingers cut off again, do you, mister?"—Chicago Tribune.

A Startling Episode.

Napoleon Whiffles was a big man. He had a profession, an estate and a wife.

Like a star of the first magnitude had Amantia Jessup dawned upon the social horizon of Newburgh. None had known her previous to her advent, but there were those who had known her progenitors in the other years.

His heart had been offered up, and the offering had been accepted, and, moreover, Amantia had given her own heart in exchange.

Napoleon sat in his studio. It was a large room on the lower floor, overlooking a broad garden. Napoleon sat there, smoking a pipe and looking at a picture of a young woman, his mind busy in framing castles in the clouds of romance, when Amantia entered.

"My angel is going out," he said when she had kissed him.
"Yes, darling, but not for long. I shall soon return, and when I come back you must let me come and sit with you here. I am only perfectly happy when I am with my love."

Amantia went away, and Napoleon pushed his pipe aside.

"Poor fool!" he muttered to himself. "They would have cast suspicion upon my angel's character! They would have made me doubt her! Verily, they have their reward, and I have mine."

He had spoken thus when the door communicating with the hall was unceremoniously opened and a stranger entered. Napoleon arose. There was something in the appearance of the stranger that filled him with awe.

"Pardon me, sir, for this intrusion. My business is of importance. Your name, sir?"

"Napoleon Whiffles."

"Ah, I thought so! But he scented—be seated."

"Mr. Whiffles, you wonder why I am here. I saw a lady leave this house, a lady beautiful—beautiful without, but alas, within!"

"Hold!" interrupted Napoleon. "My wife has just left me."

"I feared it. Her dress was of blue, her mantle of white ermine, her bonnet a gossamer spray, her tresses golden, her eyes a heavenly blue, her—"

"Enough!" again interrupted Napoleon. "You have described my Amantia."

The stranger wrung his hands.
"Alas, another unfortunate duped and betrayed!"Napoleon started to his feet.
"Mr. Whiffles, I seek no vengeance on you. Behold in me Emil Blenheim. Once I was for a time withdrawn from the realm of science, attracted by an earthly spirit. That earthly spirit dwelt in the form of Amantia Jessup. I told her of my love, and she—"

"We were married. A few short months of bliss, a few ecstatic months, and she left me, bore away my jewels, broke my heart. I don't blame you, nor shall my hand reach the fair flesh of the woman who has betrayed us both, but the law shall decide between us."

Full half an hour Whiffles sat in his chair with his head bent forward upon the table. Finally he arose and went with tottering steps to his cabinet and from one of the drawers took a pistol.

He cocked it, but he hesitated.
"No. This is too ghastly a work. It shall be more quiet."

He put back the pistol, and from another drawer he took a morocco case in which were a score of tiny vials.

He went to the sideboard and into a goblet poured a generous measure of wine, and into the wine he poured half the contents of the vial, then set the goblet upon the table before him.

He had grasped the goblet when the door of his room was a second time unceremoniously opened. He looked up and beheld an elderly gentleman with a benevolent aspect, accompanied by two stout serving men.

"I beg your pardon, sir," said the elderly gentleman, "but this intrusion is not without cause. You have had a visitor within an hour?"

"Blenheim?" suggested Napoleon.
The elderly gentleman smiled, and the two stout serving men nodded.

"My dear Mr. Whiffles, by that name I recognize my patient, though he has no legal claim to it. Can you tell me whether he has gone?"

"He left me half an hour ago. What of him? Who is he?"
"A patient escaped from our insane asylum at Worcester. His name is Jarvis Thornburn. A railroad accident, by which he was seriously injured and his wife, whom he devotedly loved, was killed, coming upon him at a time when his mental powers had been strained to their utmost, completely unseated his reason. Poor fellow! His greatest suffering consists in the impression that his wife has deserted him."

"And," ventured Napoleon, "he sometimes takes other men's wives for his?"

"Yes. And that phase of his insanity is the one we have chiefly to guard against. He never sees a beautiful woman that he does not claim her as his wife."

He had just poured the fatal contents of the goblet out of the window when the door was opened for the third time, and Amantia, radiant in her loveliness, stood before him.—New York News.

A Judicial Slip.

A story is told of a judge who became so interested in the statement of a woman he was interviewing who had just missed fatally stabbing his victim that he exclaimed at one part of the narrative, "Ah, you should have stabbed more to the left!" The judge was the last man to have committed a deed of violence, but his surprise that the thing had not been done more skillfully caused him to forget the question of life and death which was involved.

TROTTING

Races in Which Cresceus and The Abbott Were to Have Figured Declared Off.

Readville, Mass., Sept. 18.—The trotting races between Cresceus and The Abbott, Boralma and Lord Derby scheduled for Friday, have been declared off.

It seems that Ketcham, after agreeing to meet The Abbott for a purse of $29,000, given by Thomas W. Lawson, refused to sign the articles. Ed Gees offered to let him have $15,000 of the purse, no matter which horse won, but Ketcham was unyielding. Ketcham says that he came on to carry out his part of the race that had been originally arranged between Cresceus, Boralma and Charley Herr for a purse of $50,000, and insisted on holding Lawson to the terms.

Lawson's reply was an order to withdraw the purse he had offered for the present races.

A ROAMING FARM.

The Risk of Buying Real Estate Overseas.

"I used to own a piece of property out west," said the Boston man to his fellow smokers in the chair car, "and I was rather glad the other day to hear that it was lost for good and all."

"But it's rather odd for real estate to get lost?" queried one of the quartet.
"I grant that it is, but my 20 acres is the exception. It was on the Kansas side of the Missouri river, and one day, after I had owned it for a year, that little farm went sailing over to the Missouri side—that is, the river cut a new channel around it. I lost my little, of course, but it wasn't 12 months before it was restored. The old channel filled up, and my farm came back. I wanted to make a quick sale before it could move again, but found I had two acres extra. While the papers were being made out to fit the river cut in again, and I had an island of 11 acres. A man wanted to buy it for a summer resort, but it worked over the line into Missouri again and was returned to 11 acres. In the course of a year it started back to Kansas and increased to 30 acres, but I had scarcely written my agent to sell it for any price, he could get when the farm became an island again, and last week high water came booming along and cut it all away and carried the dirt ten miles down stream and over into Missouri. It added 30 acres to an old man's farm, and he has notified me that he is ready for a lawsuit to retain his rights, but I shan't make him any trouble. River real estate is too delusive. If I invest again, it will be along the base of some mountain in Colorado where an occasional landslide will hold things down."

THE DANCERS.

I opened my window, leaned far out and looked down on the misty, damp desolation. The river I could faintly see, black and cold. A large swept past. One tall solitary figure was at the bottom. He stood alone on the dark, motionless, silhouette against the gray mist.

In the street beneath my window a barrel organ began to play a music hall tune. Two children appeared and commenced dancing. They danced, and the mud flew from under their feet, and the rain mist wandered amid their rags. They danced, and the organ grinder turned the handle of his organ with fascinating regularity.

When he had finished his stock of tunes, he wheeled his barrel of sound away. No one had given him anything, but probably he did not think of that. He went from street to street day by day, ground forth his twelve tunes, and if pennies were thrown him he picked them up, and if pennies were not thrown him he forgot to expect to pick them up.

He moved away, and the child with the stockings followed him. The child without the stockings remained standing in the mud. I then threw her a coin. She looked at it where it fell. Then she looked up at me. She looked at the coin again and picked it up and wiped it on her dress. The street was empty. She and the gray rain mist were alone. She stood in the mud, the coin in her hand, and gazed up at me. I beckoned her to come to me, but she did not move, so I went down and brought her up to my room and placed her in a chair before the fire.

"Are you hungry?"

She shook her head.

"You are very wet!"

She shook her head.

"Are you fond of dancing?"

She nodded her head.

"Where do you live?"

"Anywhere."

"Where's your mother?"

"Nowhere."

I lit a cigarette. She drew nearer the fire.

"Where are you going?"

"To the pantomime—to dance."

"When?"

"Tomorrow."

"What are you—a fairy?"

"No—ban hevi speret."

"Who was the girl with you just now?"

"Sister."

"Does she dance in the pantomime?"

"Yes."

"What is she?"

"No other devil speret."

"What are you going to do when you grow up?"

"Dance."

"Always?"

She would not talk any more, but she crouched before the fire, staring at the red coals and seeing things there that were hidden from me. I went to bed at 11 and left her before the fire, still gazing into the burning embers. When I looked for her in the morning, she was gone. Two months later I saw her in the pantomime. She was an evil spirit. Three years passed, and I saw her again, dancing in a large west end theater.

Four years later I stood looking out from my window, and I thought of the evening of seven years ago. Again there were the gray rain mist and the damp desolation everywhere. Again there passed the low, flat barge, with the solitary figure at the helm, motionless. The waters sang their mournful, monotonous song. The organ grinder ground forth his twelve stock tunes, but the two children did not dance in the mud. I stood looking down into the desolate street, and I saw a woman walking slowly toward the river. She had a red dress on. She stopped beneath my window and looked up. I beckoned to her to come to me. She came.

I placed a chair before the fire for her.

"It was seven years ago."

"Yes. Why do you remember?"

"So you have danced?"

"Yes, I have danced."

"You have been successful?"

"Yes."

"Then why?"

"I don't know. I danced, and then I hurt my ankle and had to give it up, and then sister died, and then—"

"Yes, I see, and then?"

"And then—But it's finished now."

"It was silly to begin."

"Yes, it was silly to begin. I came here, but the windows were shut. So—"

"So—What did you come here for?"

"I remembered that night."

"Why?"

"I don't know." She would not talk any more, but sat and gazed into the red gold fire and saw things there that were hidden from me. At 11 o'clock I went to bed and left her still dreaming before the red gold fire, and the next morning she was gone. I opened my window and leaned far out. The sun was shining, and I heard the birds singing amid the embankment trees.

And the barge swept up the river, returning from its journey. At the helm I thought I saw two figures—but it may have been only fancy—a man and the figure of something that ought to have been a woman. And I heard the waters singing, not their chattering, monotonous song, but a new song, a mirthless, silent, soulless song, like the song of an evil spirit.

When to Drink Water.

Water is an aid in the process of acquiring flesh, but should not be taken liberally at meals. The best time is between meals, when the digestive functions have performed their duty. At least two quarts a day should be taken, and it should not be ice cold in temperature.

A STRANGE FACT

That the Bullets Which Killed Three Presidents Baffled Attempts of Surgeons to Locate Them.

Washington, Sept. 18.—It is a strange fact that the bullets which killed our Presidents baffled all the attempts of surgeons to locate them. Lincoln was shot in the head and it would have been fatal to have attempted to locate the bullet. After his death the surgeons tried again, but it was only after they had removed the brain that the missile rolled out on the operating table. Garfield was shot through the body, somewhat in the manner McKinley was shot. In his case, too, the surgeons probed for the ball, for nearly a month, then gave it up. At the autopsy all attempts to find it seemed useless, when suddenly the ball dropped out into a bowl. In President McKinley's case the missile of death was equally stubborn and the surgeons gave up the search because, as Dr. Myer bluntly put it, "To find it, we would have been compelled to cut him to pieces."

Mr. Flowers is the owner of many orange groves in the Riverside district and met Miss Winston while on a visit to his property.

FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Partake Liberally of Fruit.

If people ate more fruit, they would take less medicine and have much better health. There is an old saying that fruit is gold in the morning and lead at night. As a matter of fact, it may be gold at both times, but then it should be eaten on an empty stomach and not as a dessert, when the appetite is satisfied and digestion is already sufficiently taxed. Fruit taken in the morning has the fast of the night has been broken is very refreshing, and it serves as a stimulant to the digestive organs. A ripe apple or an orange may be taken at this time with good effect. Instead of eating a plate of ham or of eggs and bacon for breakfast, most people would do far better if they took some grapes, pears or apples—fresh fruit as long as it is to be had, and after that they can fall back on stewed prunes, ngs, etc. If only fruit of some sort formed an important item in their breakfasts, women would generally feel brighter and stronger and would have far better complexions than is the rule at present.

Tomato Savory.

Tomato savory is a palatable dish and is made of mashed tomatoes, minced eggs, anchovy paste and circles of buttered toast. Spread the latter with the paste and on each one lay half a roasted tomato sliced and prepared, and on top of the tomato place a poached egg.

The following dressing, with its piquant flavor, is an excellent accompaniment to tomato jelly: Mix a tablespoonful of freshly grated lemon rind, a tablespoonful of vinegar, a teaspoonful of salt and a few grains of cayenne. When well mixed, add four tablespoonfuls of whipped cream and another tablespoonful of vinegar. Put a tablespoonful on each slice of tomato jelly.

A Woman's Toilet.

It is not at all a pleasant part of the housewife's labor to scrub the floor with a handbrush and water, and yet this work must be frequently done if the house is kept clean. Mary North Van Derbeck of Lincoln, Neb., believes she has designed a scrubbing machine, which will lighten this labor greatly, and, being a woman, she ought to know what is needed in this line. It will be seen that the handle of the machine, as here illustrated, is pivoted to the frame on which the brush is clamped, the weight being divided between the rubber tread wheel and the brush when the scrubber is in operation. The advantage of this is that it always maintains an even pressure on the brush, and it is not necessary to bend over and scrub the floor with the hand.

Old-fashioned goblets are only occasionally seen on the table nowadays. But glass goblets are almost the inevitable part of a formal dinner.

There They Were.

"I am here, gentlemen," explained the prisoner to his fellow prisoners, "as the result of a moment of abstraction."

"And I am here," said the incendiary, "because of an unfortunate habit of making that of things."

"And I," added the burglar, "through being but taking advantage of an opportunity which offered in a large mercantile establishment in town."—Kansas City Independent.

Sleeping Rooms.

In all sleeping apartments where carpeting is used in the interest of health, an uncovered point of light should be entirely excluded from the room so as to prevent the accumulation of dust, possibly containing dangerous microbes in the air.

If this burner is regularly washed with water containing a disinfectant, it will also aid materially in purifying the room.

FUSION EFFECTED.

Nabaska Democrats and Populists Name a Ticket.

Lincoln, Neb., Sept. 18.—Fusion between the Democratic and Populist parties was effected by the state conventions. As a result of an agreement to fuse the Democrats are given the head of the ticket, supreme court justice, and the two regents of the university go to the Populists. The ticket is: Justice of the supreme court, Conrad Hollerbeck of Dodge county; regents of the university, J. D. Rogers, Frontier county; Fred V. Pawley, Nemaha county. Absolute fusion in the leadership of W. J. Bryan marked the speeches and resolutions.

Shaffer to Explain.

Pittsburg, Sept. 18.—After taking time to think it over, Peter T. J. Shaffer of the Amalgamated Association has announced that he will make no public statement of the terms of the settlement of the strike of his organization with the United States Steel corporation. He has also decided to issue a circular giving the terms of the agreement on which the men were ordered to return to work, and after all the lodges have received it, the circular will be made public. A large majority of the strikers have returned to work.

Shipping Disasters.

Houghton, Mich., Sept. 18.—Shipping disasters are following one another in rapid succession. On Eagle River reef, an unknown western steamer foundered with all hands there, and a whaleback was discovered resting on the reef. The hoisting crew is endeavoring to reach the stranded craft, although a terrific sea is running. The buoy at the canal saw a steamer laboring in the sea, watched her for four hours, and finally all lights disappeared. It is feared she foundered.

New Baseball League.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Sept. 18.—A proposition is on foot to organize a new baseball league, under the protection of the American league, that will practically be a revival of the old Western league. The cities now on the list for franchises are Indianapolis, Toledo, Columbus, Grand Rapids, Milwaukee, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Kansas.

Mrs. Bresci Asked to Leave.

New York, Sept. 18.—Mayor Newnam of Cliff Side Park, N. J., has notified Mrs. Bresci, the widow of the man who killed King Humbert, that it would be well if she moved from the borough at an early date. The notification was not a threat but simply an invitation to go. Mrs. Bresci has been keeping a boarding house, which she started with money supplied by the anarchists, who were associates of her husband before he left the country on his mission to kill Italy's ruler.

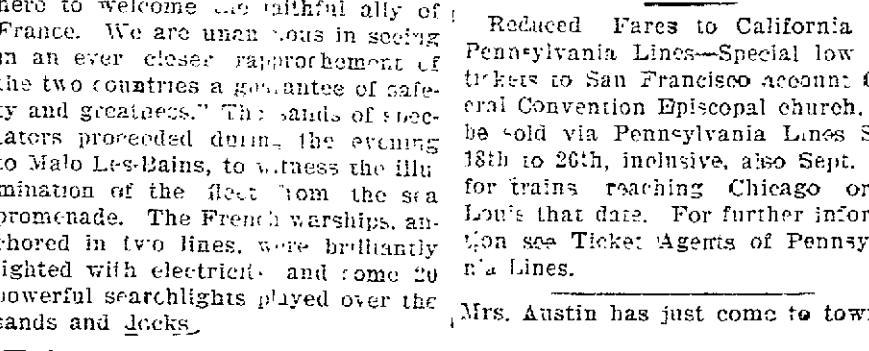

May Not Accept.

Milwaukee, Sept. 18.—Judge Robert O. Titus of Buffalo, who was appointed by Judge Emery to defend Czolgosz, the assassin of President McKinley, is in Milwaukee attending the meeting of the supreme council of Scottish Rite Masons. He has not yet made up his mind as to accepting the appointment. Should he accept, he said, it might ruin the work of a lifetime.

Louise and the Czar.

Dunkirk, France, Sept. 18.—President Louche, accompanied by M. Wallock-Rossau, the premier, and M. Delcasse, the minister of foreign affairs, arrived in Dunkirk on his way to receive Emperor Nicholas. He was welcomed by large crowds, and cordially cheered. Speaking in the new town hall, which he formally opened, M. Louche said: "I am happy to come here to welcome our faithful ally of France. We are unanimous in seeing in an ever closer rapprochement of the two countries a guarantee of safety and greatness." The sounds of music proceeded during the evening to M. Les-Bains, to witness the illumination of the fleet from the sea promenade. The French warships, anchored in two lines, were brilliantly lighted with electric light, and some 20 powerful searchlights played over the sands and locks.

Not Overrated.

"I suppose," said the effusive lady who was visiting the Mecktons, "that your wife is sure that she has the best husband that ever lived."

"Yes," answered Meckton, with something like a sigh. "But at the same time I don't believe she thinks that is saying much for me."—Washington Star.

Were the Liberals at Bocas Del Toro.

Colon, Colombia, Sept. 18.—The Colombian cruiser General Pinzon (formerly the Namonal) returned, bringing news of an easy victory for the government troops at Bocas Del Toro last Saturday. The liberals or insurgents were utterly routed and their guns and ammunition captured. Colonel Grizo, commanding the Colombian troops at Bocas Del Toro, a force of about 300 men, approached Providencia island, the insurgent position opposite the town, from different points, by means of boats and launches. He effected a landing unopposed and attacked the liberals in the front and rear. A sharp and decisive skirmish ensued in which the rebels lost 30 killed and wounded and 40 who were taken prisoner. The others made their escape. The government forces lost five killed and four wounded.

General Funston Ill.

Manilla, Sept. 18.—General Hughes has expelled the agents of Smith & Bell and Warner & Barnes from the island of Samar for rendering aid to the insurgents in Manilla by buying hemp and other produce, knowing that the money was going to the insurgents. The British consul requested General Chaffee to suspend the order, but the general refused to do so, and the consul has gone to Samar for the purpose of personally investigating the matter. General Funston is in the hospital suffering from appendicitis. He will probably be operated upon. Aguinaldo has written to Civil Governor Taft and Military Governor Chaffee saying that he regrets, with the rest of the American nation, the great loss suffered by the people of the United States in the death of President McKinley.

Trial of a Japanese Assassin.

Yokohama, Sept. 6, via Victoria, B. C., Sept. 18.—The trial of Etsa Sotani, assassin of Heshi Toru, former minister to Washington, is now in progress and absorbs public attention. The high social and moral station of the prisoner, his extraordinary cool, collected and sane demeanor, made his statement when under examination an event of great dramatic interest. He gives intense moral indignation at political corruption as the sole motive for his deed. Under the impulse, he was acting strictly in accordance with the old Japanese idea of the duty of a Samurai.

CITY ENGINEER

In a Card Explains More Fully the Report Because of Some Misrepresentation.

(Communicated.)

The American Tribune in yesterday's issue in reporting the action of the City Council of last Monday evening, made some gross misstatements regarding the report of the city civil engineer. The report does not recommend the abandonment of the old sewers. Nothing was said about a new system in any part of the city now sewered. The Buckeye Traction Company is not being delayed from entering the city but is asked to lay before the council a plan of its construction before it tears up the streets, as was required by the city of Columbus. Every fairminded person must admit it is only reasonable as the city then can come to some understanding before the streets are made impassable by construction that is objectionable to the property owners as well as the best judgment of the council. The city possesses no records of street grades, sewer grades, sewer house connections, etc. It was under the above conditions that prompted the city engineer to make the "very voluminous" report. The acting city engineer is responsible for the report notwithstanding the fact that he is "young and lacks the experience" of a certain candidate for the position of city engineer—and not the street committee.

The report does not recommend new maps of the city. The report does recommend that a system of bench marks, or level monuments be established in every part of the city, for the purpose of referring all surveys and grades and elevations to a common level, thereby bringing the surveys of the city to a system. This work can be done by the officer without a cent of additional cost to the city aside from the salary of the engineer. The report further does not recommend the changing of the grades of the streets of the city. But it does recommend that the city take steps to level the streets now paved and established, that a record may be made of them in the engineer's office. This work also can be done by the officer without additional cost. Further, it certainly is apparent to every one that it would be an advantage to the city as well as to the engineer to know the existence of the sewers and water mains now under our streets. The report simply recommends that these sewers and water mains and other large pipes now laid under our streets be, as fast as practicable, surveyed and leveled, for the purpose of furnishing the city with as complete a record as possible.

If the city possessed the above knowledge it would save to the city several thousands of dollars in the future improvements of the city.
